Pearl Jam's "Do The Evolution" is a heavy and deep criticism of humanity, mocking the economic, social, political, and religious system through the ages. The song's ideal is to show how the "progressive" animal, the man, can be the same cursed being that repeats the same destructive errors in all the times and may condemn Earth into doom.

And on Gigaton, the band's long-simmering new record, the Pearl Jam sound has changed a bit as well. It's been six and a half years since the group's last album Lightning Bolt delivered an uneven admixture of spiky punk throwbacks and easygoing AOR, and the intervening years saw the members embark on a variety of solo projects and side gigs. . Some of those disparate ventures must have ...
